Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US 5319867 (Weber) in view of [pages 1-7 of PORON 90, The Ultimate in Cushioning. The Ultimate in Performance] and [PORON 4000 Performance Urethanes -90 Series - Typical Properties]. The last two references will be referred to as Rogers in the rejection below.

Weber teaches a moisture wicking fabric layer (14) having elongated fibers (20,22) and a lower foam cushioning layer (12) substantially as claimed except for the foam layer having the characteristics as claimed. Weber teaches the cushioning layer could be made out of a plurality of different materials; see col. 4, lines 1-14. Rogers teaches an insole made out of the exact foamed Poron material used by applicant, see paragraph bridging pages 2 and 3 of the instant application. Rogers teaches "PORON 90 controlled rebound products can be fabricated and laminated with other materials to create unique performance composites", bold face added. It would have been obvious to construct the foam layer (12) of Weber out of the Poron foamed material, as taught by Rogers, to provide improved cushioning characteristics. The fibers inherently contribute to distributing the load.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed June 23, 2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Weber as combined would not teach the claimed invention because it has qualities of resilience or springyness.

In response, the claim calls for a “non-spring cushioning material”, the Weber doesn’t teach a cushioning device with springs and therefore is “non-springy”. Moreover, no one in the disclosure does Weber teach the sole is springy. The definition of “resilience” is “the property of a material that enables it to resume its original shape or position after bent, stretched or compressed; elasticity.” Applicant appears to equate “springy” with “resilience” which are not equal. Moreover, “non- springy” is being claimed. Also, the foam cushioning device of Weber has been modified with the teaching of Rogers which teaches the exact material claimed by applicant, see the rejection above for details.

Regarding, the suggestion to combined the references; see the rejection above which provides motivation to combine the elements.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.

Conclusion

5. Applicant is duly reminded that a complete response must satisfy the requirements of 37 C.F. R. 1.111, including:

-“The reply must present arguments pointing out the specific distinctions believed to render the claims, including any newly presented claims, patentable over any applied references.”

--“A general allegation that the claims define a patentable invention without specifically pointing out how the language of the claims patentably distinguishes them from the references does not comply with the requirements of this section.”

-Moreover, “The prompt development of a clear issue requires that the replies of the applicant meet the objections to and rejections of the claims. Applicant should also specifically point out the support for any amendments made to the disclosure. See MPEP 2163.06” MPEP 714.02. The “disclosure” includes the claims, the specification and the drawings.
